

From: LE CORRE Vincent B [REDACTED]
Subject: Fraud in China part 1
Date: February 7, 2023 at 13:46
To: Edward Lehman [REDACTED]
Cc: Adam Rogalski <RogalskiA@state.gov>

Dear Mr. Lehman,

I attach 2 screenshots to this email from our WeChat exchanges.

Remember you asked me “China has nothing to do with this matter, right?” (See file IMG_6846.PNG).

Well, McDonald’s, as a matter of fact, committed fraud in China using similar methods.

For the purpose of clarity, I will send a second email with some files to show you and Mr. Rogalski the fraud.

Why it matters? Well, considering the modus operandi is similar, I think China could notify Interpol in theory, if and only if the French corrupted National Police, and or the FBI refuse to alert Interpol.

So far, it’s extremely troubling that I almost have to beg the FBI to answer me.

It’s kind of disgraceful a bit.

sigh

It’s sad.

Vincent Le Corre

IMG_6846.PNG image/png 787.5 KiB

IMG_6845.PNG image/png 321.2 KiB

Oct 30, 2022 20:30

What? Apply to Chinese authorities to seek right to protest in china? I do not think I know if it is possible. It is not prudent.

Vincent: 1) are you willing to help me try to obtain, with the Chinese ...

This will not solve the issue with MCDC

Vincent: 1) are you willing to help me try to obtain, with the Chinese ...

I think you should not do it

Vincent: 2) in the event you were to agree to help me to try to obtain the ...

China has nothing to do with this matter, right?

Yes, it sounds suicidal but until now, I don't really see what other options I have. French law professor Yves Strickler whose one of the speciality is civil procedure confirmed to me that a hunger strike could work in getting

2) in the event you were to agree to help me to try to obtain the proper authorizations, AND in the event the Chinese authorities were to refuse to grant such authorizations and to me, would you be willing to help me, in the event I were to protest before the French Embassy in Beijing without proper authorization and in the event I would be arrested in China? For example, there are some international journalist following my Twitter account. Would you be willing to confirm to them that McDonald's did indeed commit fraud?