Dear Messrs. Rogalski and Manjarrez,

Before I start explaining to you more specifically the aggravated frauds McDonald's Corporation and/or its affiliated companies and/or its suppliers have committed, I want to inform you that I registered and activated the domain names XiJinping.fr (as in Xi Jinping (习近平), the President of the People's Republic of China) and LiKeqiang.org (as in Li Keqiang (李克强), the Premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China).

It's fair to say that, overall, McDonald's has committed some of the biggest frauds in history. They defrauded millions of consumers and they are currently defrauding investors.

I really need the help of the F.B.I. and after having a quick look at the Attorney General Guidelines for Victim and Witness Assistance

<https://www.ecthrwatch.org/laws/attorney-general-guidelines-for-victim-and-witness-assistance/>

but also at the F.B.I. Victims of Crime brochure

<https://www.ecthrwatch.org/laws/fbi-victim-assistance-program/>

I sincerely and confidently believe that I can count on the F.B.I. for the truth to see the light of day in this unprecedented case of sweepstakes frauds and money laundering.

Because I live in China, I must be transparent with the Chinese government. It's one of the reasons I am publishing my communications to the F.B.I. on the Internet.

This being said, could addressing open letters to Messrs. Xi and Li get me in trouble? I hope not. I hope that some intelligent Chinese officials within the government understood that I was actually right and that McDonald's did indeed commit multiple counts of aggravated frauds.

This being said, I prefer to be cautious and I would greatly appreciate if the F.B.I. and/or the embassies of the United States in Beijing and/or in Paris could quickly confirm to the Chinese government that my serious accusations that McDonald's committed multiple counts of aggravated fraud are true.

Thank you very much.

Yours sincerely,
